The Khuddasikkhā and Mūlasikkhā form a short compendium of the Vinaya, mostly in verse, a few passages only being given in prose. The MSS. of the same are all written in the Burmese character, and there is also a Burmese edition which comprises the Bhikkhupātimokkha, the Bhikkhuṇīpātimokkha and the Abhidhammatthasamgraha, printed at Rangoon in 1882; we possess, however, a Sinhalese commentary belonging to the twelfth century, which proves that the books must have been known in Ceylon at that time.

About the age of the books it is very difficult to form a certain opinion. The language is rather more modern than that of the Mahāvamsa, and exigencies of the metre have introduced forms which are anything but classical; for instance, the optative de from dā, the metathesis hāram paccā for paccāhāram, III. 5, and the frequent elision of a beginning vowel after anusvāra, which only occurs in late texts (see Childers, s.v. peyyālam, and J.R.A.S. vol. xi. p. 112). The language is, however, not so artificial and not mixed with Sanskritisms to such an extent as that of the Dāṭhāvamsa.

Alwis, in his introduction to the Sidat Sangarāwa, p. cl, assigns a rather early date to Khuddasikkhā and Mūlasikkhā, viz. A.D. 350, but without any sufficient reasons. It seems that the language of the Sinhalese commentary has misled him, a language only little more modern than that of the rock inscription of Mihintale (see my Ancient Inscriptions in Ceylon, No. 121), the date of which Alwis, following Turnour (Ceylon Almanac for 1834, p. 137), has fixed in A.D. 262. It was, however, already shown by Paul Goldschmidt that this cannot be correct, and that the inscription belongs to Mahinda III. at the end of the tenth and beginning of the eleventh century.

The question about the age of Khuddasikkhā and Mūlasikkhā is, of course, quite independent from that about the commentary, and so we may still consider the statement from the Burmese histories of the Piṭaka adduced by Forchhammer in his Report, p. 5, that a Sinhalese priest, by name Dhamma Sirī, wrote the Mūlasikkhā, and a conferee Mahāsāmi the Khuddasikkhā, about 920 years after Gautama’s death. In fact, the name of the author of Khuddasikkhā is given as Dhammasiri in the last stanza but one:

tenā Dhammasiriḥena Tambapanṇīyaketunā
therena racitā dharmavinayañūnupasaṃsitā.

Under these circumstances, I must leave it undecided for the present whether the date as given by Alwis and Forchhammer is correct, or whether we should in fixing it consider the language, which rather points to the sixth or seventh century. I will only mention besides that both works are referred to in the great inscription of Parākrama-bāhu at the Gālwihāra, Polonnaruwa (see my Ancient Inscriptions in Ceylon, No. 137), in lines 19 and 22, and that the great grammarian Moggallāna, living at the same time, is said to have written a āṭkā on Khuddasikkhā, which may have been the base of the Sinhalese commentary still in existence (see Note on the Pāli Grammarian Kaccāyana, by Lieut.-Col. G. E. Fryer, in his Subodhālankāra, p. 4).

At the end of the text will be found a comparative list of passages in Khuddasikkhā and Mūlasikkhā on one side and Oldenberg’s Vinaya on the other. In spite of a careful investigation, I have not succeeded in identifying all the passages of the two texts given here, and I am driven to the conclusion that these passages are not contained in the text of the Vinaya, but are taken from the commentaries. In a few cases I have succeeded in identifying passages from Samanta Pāsādikā and Kankhā Vitarani with the help of the quotations given in Minayeff’s edition of the Pāṭimokkha.
